

TENNYSON IS DEAD.

Passes Away Like a Poet, While Moonbeams Pour on His Bed.

His Wife, His Son and His Physician at His Side.

The End So Peaceful that Only the Doctor Knew When It Came.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)
LONDON, Oct. 6.—Lord Tennyson died at 1.35 A. M.

Sir Andrew Clark, one of the physicians who attended him, said that Lord Tennyson's death was the most glorious he had ever seen.

There was no artificial light in the room, and the chamber was almost in darkness, save where a broad flood of moonlight poured in through a western window.

The dying man lay, bathed in light, in their pure light and forming a Rembrandt-like background to the scene.

All was silent save the sighing of the autumn wind as it gently played through the trees surrounding the house.

Motionless, Lord Tennyson lay upon his couch, the tide of life gently and slowly ebbing out into the ocean of the infinite. No rocks of pain or sorrow checked its course or caused a ripple upon the outgoing tide. As peacefully and gently as he had lived he died, looking until the end into the eyes of those dear to him.

All the members of his family were by the bedside, with Sir Andrew Clark.

The family did not know he was gone until Dr. Clark broke the news to Lady Tennyson.

The Hon. Hallam Tennyson, the poet's son, says that his father once or twice during the night lifted his eyes to the faces of his watchers and a beautiful smile played over his features. As the end came he appeared to fall asleep.

Hallam says that Lady Tennyson bears up with fortitude under the sorrow that has come to her.

The Tennysons have no family burial ground, and it is expected that Lord Tennyson's remains will be interred in Westminster Abbey. His funeral will be a public one.

Alfred Tennyson, Baron Tennyson, of Aldworth, Sussex, and of Freshwater, Isle of Wight, was the third son of the late Rev. G. C. Tennyson, the elder brother of the late Right Hon. C. Tennyson, of Plymouth. He was born in 1809, and died in 1892, was a daughter of his mother, who died in 1865, was a daughter of her mother.

He was educated by his father, and proceeded to Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1829. He gained the chancellorship of the Trinity College, Cambridge, in 1841.

With the exception of a volume of poems published in 1830, and a volume of poems published in 1832, he published nothing else until 1830, when "Poems Chiefly Lyric" appeared, and from 1842 the steady and rapid growth of his fame may be traced.

The two volumes then issued were in part merely a republication, but the most important poem was those added to his former productions. It was at once apparent that the author of the "Morte d'Arthur," "Locksley Hall," "The May Queen," and "The Two Voices" was entitled to take the first rank among English poets of the present time.

His fame had been established by the publication of "In Memoriam," in 1850, that it seemed only a matter of course, upon the death of Wordsworth in 1850, that the laurel of wearing the laurel wreath should be conferred upon him.

This was also the year of his marriage to Emily, daughter of Henry Selwood, Esq., of Berkshire, and niece of Sir John Lubbock, whom he had two sons, Hallam and Alfred. The "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington," in 1852, and the "Ode on the Morning of the Funeral," and since that time he has been the most popular and most widely read of English poets.

His earlier publications were "Poems Chiefly Lyric," published in 1830; "Poems in 1832; "The Princess," in 1847; "In Memoriam," issued anonymously, 1850; "The Idylls of the King," in 1859; and the "Ode on the Death of the Duke of Wellington," in 1852; "The Idylls of the King," in 1859; and the "Ode on the Morning of the Funeral," and since that time he has been the most popular and most widely read of English poets.

HAS QUAY BEEN CALLED ON?

Said to Be Coming to Advise Republican Managers.

Col. Fellows Thinks New York Is for Cleveland by 50,000.

"Dave" Martin, of Philadelphia, said this morning that he did not keep tabs on Mr. Quay's movements, and therefore could not say whether the Pennsylvania senator was coming here, as reported, to assist Chairman Cleveland in the conduct of the Republican campaign.

Martin and John L. Davenport had their heads close together this forenoon at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. Davenport said curtly: "I know nothing about Quay," and at Republican headquarters the managers acted as though they had never heard of Senator Quay when questioned about him.

Notwithstanding the professed ignorance regarding the Chairman of '88, it is positively asserted that Mr. Quay will be here in a day or two. He is in Philadelphia today, and "Dave" Martin will take a run over to the Quaker City to-morrow to see him and perhaps return with him.

Mr. Quay will have the benefit of Quay's advice at this critical period of the campaign. It is said that President Harrison, who is alarmed over the condition of affairs, has made a personal appeal to Quay to come to Cleveland's assistance.

Whether the President really asked his old enemy to help him out or not, some strong language from a high place must have been brought to bear on Quay, for it was only last week that he said in an interview, "I am out of politics."

Congressman John R. Fellows returned this morning from a campaigning tour in West Virginia, and gave the following report: "In this State, Ask & regarding his observations of the situation, he said: 'We are going to have a very close election. The Republicans are whipped and they know it. I would not be a bit surprised if Cleveland got over fifty thousand majority in this State. West Virginia will go Democratic by a bigger majority than it has for several years. I would not be surprised to see the Democrats sweep the country next Fall as they did two years ago.'

The Gazette adds in view of the above swinehouse has lavished upon Mr. Gladstone, the choice would be characteristic and an instance of a great man's magnanimity."
